

Music

Music has been my primary creative outlet throughout my life.

I was classically trained as a percussionist, later transitioning to guitar and songwriting in my twenties. Over the years, I've performed with several local bands, including Scratched Vinyl, Strumpet, We The Band, and most recently Great Highway. My musical style has evolved across genres, ranging from rock and acoustic jazz to blues, and more recently, electronic rock.

With Great Highway, I've contributed to over five full-length albums, in addition to appearing on three other albums with previous projects. Great Highway is an eclectic, high-energy dance-rock group often described as indietronica. Their sound blends electric harp, alto saxophone, drums, and layered synth textures to create emotionally resonant, earworm-driven songs.

Music provides a sense of calm and mental clarity for me, and it has always gone hand in hand with my creative scientific pursuits. These days, one of my favorite ways to unwind at home is by playing simple classical guitar pieces on my nylon-string guitar.